COLLEGE AGE GROUP TO SHOW SUPERB COLORED MOVIES

FRIEND GIVES LIFE SKETCH OF DR. IREYS

One of these days some painstaking writer probably will publish a history of the pioneers of San Diego's "back country." In such a volume the story of the first physician of this section will, of course, find a place He was Dr. Junius Taylor Ireys. When he passed on a few weeks ago real sorrow was felt by many old-timers, not only in Lakeside where for some years he made his headquarters, but in the surrounding country where he was beloved as physician and friend. The story of his life has been beautifully written by his brother-in-law, Mr. Alfred H. Stone of Jackson, Mississippi, and has been published in a newspaper there. Mr. Stone is the husband of Mary Ireys Stone who is well known to oldtimers here and who visited her brother when his home and office were in Lakeside. Mr. Stone's sketch of the life of the late Dr. Ireys is as follows:

WAS STUDENT IN TWO UNIVERSITIES

Dr. Ireys died on March 31st, 1940, at the home of his youngest sister, Mrs. Allen Hunt, in Greenville, Mississippi, in the sixty-fifth year of his age. He was the third child, and the second son, of the late Henry Tillinghast Ireys and his wife, Betty Taylor Ireys. He was born July 4, 1876, on Mound Pleasant Plantation, near Winterville, some eight or ten miles north of Greenville. He had been in failing health for several years. His death followed a critical illness of only a few days.

Junius Taylor Ireys was "Juny" to those who knew him as a boy, in Greenville, and at the University of Mississippi. He was Dr. Ireys during the rest of his life, and to the rest of the world. His life falls easily and naturally into two phases: His boyhood and youth in Washington county, his academic education at the University of Mississippi, followed by his education in Medicine at the University of Pensylvania. A career which his standing as a student gave promise of being brilliant was cut short by illness.

SPENT 37 YEARS IN CALIFORNIA

The second phase of his life covered a residence of thirty-seven years in California, most of which was a period of outstanding service as a Christian physician and friend. Dr. Ireys graduated at the University of Pennsylvania in 1900. Because of his scholastic standing, he was immediately made a surgical interne in the Easton Railroad Hospital, at Easton, Pennsylvania. Plans formulated by his father and himself contemplated a period of several years study abroad.

Lakeside Camera Club's Second Show Brings Out Number of Artistic Prints

Lakeside Camera Club's second print contest attracted lovers of photography to the Woman's Clubhouse last Friday night and they were well rewarded for the exhibition was very interesting. The prints displayed proved attractive both from a local and artistic point of view. The fact that they were made by local amateurs showed that those who have taken up this hobby have become proficient in choosing subjects and in making prints.

Elmer Walker, member of Grossmont High School faculty again won first prize. It will be remembered that he carried off the high honor at the first print contest here. His print was titled "Four in a Boat" and is reproduced above. Second place went to Mrs. Cecil Carender with "Interrupted study." Mrs. Harry Koehler won third place with "Through My Window," and Dick Bartmess was fourth with "Lonesome."

The judges were Charlie Andrews, Mrs. E. Major and Dorothy Turner. After the judging Mr. Andrews gave a lecture on the value of whites and blacks in commercial pictures. Refreshments were served by Mrs. Cecil Carender and Mrs. B. J. Conrad.

The first prize was one dozen sheets of 11x14 enlarging paper donated by A. B. C. Darcy of San Diego. A melancholy interest attaches to Mr. Walker's winning print. The dog, so happy in the boat with the three children, was later poisoned by some person unknown.

In addition to the prize winners exhibits were made by the following: Mrs. B. J. Conrad, Walter Hanson, Rev. T. I. Nalbach and Arthur Graham.

Commencement Issue Of Static Pleases

Full of news about the graduates and with other special features, the commencement issue of Static, published weekly by the seventh grade of Lakeside Union Elementary school, is a number the staff may well be proud of. It hails the class of 1940 as the largest to graduate in the school's history.

The history of the class is set forth at length, It is noted that 16 members began their school career in Lakeside. The class will pays tribute to Principal Carender and Mrs. Miller "for getting us into the High School."

Two pages are devoted to the hobby show, sponsored by the Fifth grade last Friday. The history of the Sixth grade is detailed. The story of Lakeside School Bank is also given and there are the usual literary and sport pages. Altogether a fine Static.

Curator of Museum Buys Bloom Home

Stating that he is greatly impressed with the country out here, Frank F. Gander, curator of the Museum of Natural History in Balboa Park and Supervisor of Nature Study for San Diego County schools, has purchased the Capt. Albert Bloom home overlooking Lindo Lake. Mr. an dMrs. Gander and their three children will move into their new home after the school term ends in San Diego.

Mr. Gander is well known to Lakeside people, particularly those engaged in educational work, and he and his family will be cordially welcomed. As curator of the museum he often has conducted the interesting tours to centers of interest throughout the county which have proved so popular and instructive.

CHILDREN'S DAY

A special program has been prepared for Children's Day, June 9, by the Sunday school of the Lakeside Community Church. Mr. E. H. Carender and Mr Lewis Kalstrom will be in charge

La Mesa Publisher Stresses Importance Of Weekly Newspapers In Talk To Club

Importance of weekly newspapers, not only to their own communities but as defenders of American freedom against pressure groups, was stressed by Carlyle Reed, publisher of La Mesa Scout, in an address to the National City Kiwanis Club.

Mr. Reed pointed out to his listeners, reports the National City News, that the small weekly performs a community service that cannot be duplicated by any other agency of information. He described this service as the dissemination of news regarding purely local affairs and the activities of local citizens, and the building of a community through providing a reasonably-priced medium for local advertising.

Mr. Reed stated that any community without its own publication soon finds that a local press is indispensable to progress. He also described the local papers as the first line of defense against pressure groups which, he said, are threatening the freedom of the press in America to an almost unbelievable extent.

Faculty Breakfast Held at El Monte

Marking not only Memorial Day but the end of the school term the annual faculty breakfast of Lakeside Union Elementery School educators, and of the members of the Governing Board of the school district was held at El Monte park yesterday. It was attended by the teachers, the trustees and members of their families.

Goodness moves in a larger sphere than justice.—Plutarch.

SCHOOL ENDS AS GRADUATES GET DIPLOMAS

With time-honored ceremonies the senior class of Lakeside Union Elementary School received their graduation diplomas Wednesday night in the school auditorium before a large throng of relatives and friends.

It was a happy gathering particularly for the 36 young people who received their diplomas from Mr. John B. Wilkinson Jr., chairman of the governing board. The exercises marked the end of the school term. Ordinarily the finish of the semester would have come today but as yesterday was Memorial Day and a holiday it was decided that the term should come to a close with Wednesday nights pleasant program.

Adding to the delight of the evening were the musical numbers contributed by the Girls' Chorus, the Girls' Quartette, trumpet and saxophone soloists and the school orchestra. The list of graduates was published last week.

GRADUATES CONTRIBUTE SECOND GENERATION

A very interesting fact in connection with Lakeside Union Elementary school graduation is pointed out by E. H. Carender, district superintendent. The Lakeside Union school was organized in 1923 and graduates of that time are beginning to contribute the second generation. Of the class graduating here this week these are reported to be children of parents at least one of whom was also a graduate of this school: Jackie Dillon, Le Roy Dillion and Jerry Fair.

MORE KARAKUL FUR SHEEP DELIVERED

James Yoakam, president California Karakul Sheep, Ltd., reports delivering a number of these animals in San Diego County during May. Among the purchasers were Mr. and Mrs. Charles M. Lucas of Lakeside Farms. George Gibson was the first buyer here.

Treasure Island's flower gardens are in full bloom to please the crowds attending the opening of Golden Gate International exposition.

PIANO FUND BENEFIT AT SCHOOLHOUSE

Colored motion pictures of many notable scenes in the United States, which have been described as superb, wherever shown, will be exhibited at Lakeside Union school auditorium on Tuesday evening under the auspices of the College Age Young People group of Lakeside Community Church. This is to be a benefit for the group's piano fund.

The films are the work of Mr. and Mrs. F. L. Wight of Bangor, Maine, who made a trip from Atlantic to Pacific and photographed many notable scenes. One newspaper speaks of them as follows:

"Pictures taken during early spring, then the summer colorings and winter scenes among the mountains, and late fall grandeur, ending at last in Maine, produced a panorama of color which made this showing one long to be remembered."

"They are wonderful for the school children as well as grown-ups," says another report.

Mr. and Mrs. Wight personally give the show. It includes a snappy talk with continuous explanation and is supplemented with appropriate music. The show lasts for about two hours and 20 minutes. In order that everybody may see these colored movies the price of admission has been made very low—15c for adults and 10c for children.

VERSES FOR DICTATORS

The glories of our blood and state
Are shadows, not substantial things;
There is no armour against Fate;
Death lays his icy hand on kings;
Sceptre and Crown
Must tumble down,
And in the dust be equal made
With the poor crooked scythe and spade.

Some men with swords may reap the field,
And plant fresh laurels where they kill;
But their strong nerves at last must yield;
They tame but one another still:
Early or late
They stoop to fate,
And must give up their murmuring breath
When they, pale captives, creep to death.

The garlands wither on your brow;
Then boast no more your mighty deeds!
Upon Death's purple altar now
See where the victor-victim bleeds.
Your heads must come
To the cold tomb:
Only the actions of the just
Smell sweet and blossom in the dust.
—James Shirley.

"SHE ALWAYS FED THE HUNGRY"

Wonderful words; a worthy epitaph to be carved on the stone above the mortal remains of Mrs. Jennie Lane (Mother Lane they called her) a pioneer woman of Julian, funeral services for whom were held last Friday. She passed on at the age of 91 and her memory is enshrined in the hearts of all who knew her.

One day last week the San Diego Union published a portrait of this grand old lady; underneath it were the words, "Mrs. Jennie Lane. . . she always fed the hungry." What mortal, when Life's voyage is done, can take to her Heavenly Friend a better character? Mrs. Lane has gaduated from the hard school of this world to life everlasting and she has received a diploma which is more honorable than any flashing order of the Star and Garter, or an Iron Cross, or even a bronze Swatiska.

Tales of gold mines of San Diego County and of the early hectic days when Julian was a bustling mining camp are many. But not one touches the heart more than the story of Mother Lane. Fifty-two years ago she came to Julian with her husband, the late D. F. Lane, widely known as a pioneer gold miner and owner of the historic Blue Hill mine. For years she ran a boarding house in Banner and also one in Julian. She turned away nobody who was poor and hungry; while she had food she was ready to share it with "all God's children." She gained the reputation of having fed more hungry people than any pioneer woman in California.

And so when, at the age of 91, death came to her on May 21, she was hailed as one of the most kindly women that ever stepped in our mountain towns. "No one ever left her door hungry," commented a friend James Jasper. She has gained a reputation more precious than rubies. "She stretched out her hand to the poor; yea, she reached forth her hands to the needy."

THE QUALITY OF MERCY

Philip, Duke of Burgundy, was given the title of Philip the Good, and the following incident shows that he was well named:

Approached by his courtiers with the suggestion that he punish a prelate who had spoken ill of him, Philip replied, "It is a great thing to have revenge in one's power; but it is a greater thing not to use it."

The honeymoon is over when the bills for the installment on the furniture begin to come in.

POPPIES BLOW IN FLANDERS FIELDS

In Flanders fields the poppies blow
Between the crosses, row on row,
That mark our place, and in the sky
The larks still bravely singing, fly
Scarce heard amid the guns below.

Last Saturday was Poppy Day and disabled veterans of World War No. 1 sold poppies they had made on their beds of pain. And once again the crosses rise, row on row, in Flanders Fields, above the victims of Hitler's war of revenge for the German defeat.

Poppy Day was a prelude to Memorial Day, yesterday, May 30. Memorial Day was instituted by the women of the South after the Civil War. It was marked by the fact that women of Columbus, Mississippi, on their Decoration Day, placed flowers on the graves of Northern and Southern soldiers alike. That act inspired the famous poem by Francis Miles Finch which has become an American classic.

From the silence of sorrowful hours
The desolate mourners go,
Lovingly laden with flowers
Alike for the friend and the foe;
Under the sod and the dew,
Waiting the judgment day;
Under the roses, the Blue,
Under the lilies the Gray.

CARRYING MAIL ON RURAL ROUTES

In California's early days when gold and adventure, including possibly a brush with romanticized Indians, attracted brave, ardent and virile young men from the East, letters from the old folks at home always were looked for eagerly. The pioneers in mail carrying were those grand riders, the men of the Pony Express in honor of whom Uncle Sam's post office department recently issued a special stamp.

Times change; mail is conveyed now by airplane, streamline trains, special delivery messengers, a peaceful army of city postmen and, last but not least, by rural carriers. The people along the Rural Free Delivery Route in Lakeside have this week welcomed a new carrier—that is to say new to the route but well known to them as a business man. We have no doubt that he will prove as efficient and popular as his predecessors.

Welcome as the flowers in spring is the mail carrier along the rural routes. He no longer comes galloping on a spirited horse but everyone is as glad to see him in his Ford, or his Chevy or maybe a Packard, as the people were to hail the Pony Express rider in other days—the days of old, the days of gold. He doesn't bring much gold to rural route patrons now but he brings loving messages from old friends, letters that breathe of love and tender passion, invitations to charming affairs and (forgive us for dropping from the sublime to the everyday level) the monthly bills and the notices that installments are due on the radio, the electric stove and whatnot.

No matter what he brings one likes to hear the blast of the auto horn which announces his approach and to hear the toot with which he announces that he has left some mail in the galvanized iron box at the foot of the drive. And even should he pass us by without leaving anything it is pleasant to have caught a glimpse of him driving by on his useful errand. To those who, perhaps, are obliged to sit by the side of the road and watch the world go by, he is a means of communication not only with the present but the past. He is a link with that great outside world which is being changed by tremendous events and he is the man who unites you with your own home community. So, when a change is made along our Rural Free Delivery Route, we find it a subject worthy of special mention.

FHA PLAN TO AID RURAL AREAS

Houses are like men, they go downhill as they grow older. Or to put it another way, they're like teeth—they decay. It's hard to recondition men once they reach a certain stage but houses can always be "made to look like new."

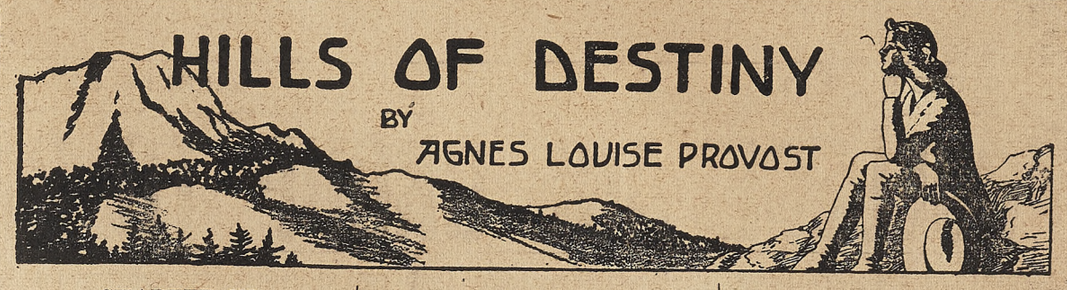
Last week's celebrations that called attention to Works Projects Administration activities here and elsewhere might also have served to remind people of what is being done through the Federal Home Loan Bank, the Federal Housing Administration and other government agencies.

Ample is the evidence that through the medium of the FHA insured-mortgage plan many homes have been improved that otherwise would have been allowed to fall into neglect. Now it is learned that a nation-wide campaign to stimulate new home construction in rural communities has been started by the Federal Housing Administration. Stewart Mc Donald, head of the FHA, declares it is the intention to encourage builders, material manufacturers and suppliers, realtors, lending institutions, and other organizations in the housing field to expand their activities in rural communities.

Let the good work go on.

It is better to turn back than to go astray.
—German proverb.

Even a tall man may not be abovecriticism says the Sage of Wildcat Canyon.



CHAPTER III

Synopsis

Lee Hollister, returning unexpectedly from a trip abroad to the Circle V ranch, his home from childhood, is troubled by signs of neglect. He is upset, too, when he meets Slanty Gano, a trouble maker whom Matt Blair, owner of the ranch had run off the land in times past. Slanty is now manager for the old Ceballos place. Joey prospector befriended by Matt, breaks the news that Matt is dead; he had killed himself. Joey says the ranch is going to ruin under Lawler, manager appointed by Virginia, Matt's daughter, who is living in New York with her aunt and uncle. Lee decides to go get her.

"Oh, no!" said Virginia when Lee told her he had come to New York to take her back to the ranch. She looked faintly startled and drew back.

"Why not?" he asked bluntly.

"It doesn't need me!" She shook her head vehemently. "It needs father, and he's gone What do I know of ranches and cattle?"

"You'll learn, and you'll have friends to help you. I can tell you some things about the Cricle V right now. I don't think you can possibly know about them, or you'd never let them go on."

There was a shade of annoyance in the lift of Virginia's delicate brows

"You're just the same Lee, aren't you? All right, let's sit down and get it over. What am I to be scolded about?"

The light tone warned him that Virginia didn't mean to be scolded at all, and he grinned back at her. Virginia hadn't changed much. He leaned forward and began to tell her of the conditions he had found at the Circle V.

"I know it needs your father," he finished, "but Matt is gone, and it's your responsibility now. The Circle V needs somebody with a real interest, and not a shiftless loafer who either can't or won't see that he is running it into the ground."

"Really!" Virginia was angry and hurt. "I employed Mr. Lawler on the advice of my friends and see no reason to question either their motives or his. However, it scarcely matters. I have a good offer for the place and I expect to sell. I suppose that you will at least concede my right to dispose of my own property?"

"Absolutely But I have a right as Matt's friend to tell you that your loyalty to him can't amount to much if in a few months you can throw aside the work of his lifetime, the land he labored and fought for, and loved better than anything on earth—except you!"

He heard her quick gasp.

"And you're going to sell him out for a little pocket money—for this!" His brief gesture contemptuously indicated the room, the house, all of her life here. "That's the best you can do for him, after all that he sacrificed for you."

"Oh, you're intolerable!" Her eyes blazed; she spoke in a breathless, unnatural way. "Whatever I may have done, or failed to do, is between my father and myself."

"All right," he said laconically "I see I was mistaken. Mistaken in you. But before I go I want to give you one question to ask yourself. Why is it that the Circle V, one of the best ranches in the state, should be going to pieces now, just when somebody else wants to get possession of it? I'm going back to find the answer, if you won't. Good-bye."

He turned with a brief nod, not even waiting for a reply, and went out.

As the outer door closed after him he paused with a deep, releasing breath and a frown for his own hot-headedness.

A car flashed into the drive and a young man stepped out. The newcomer looked with casual interest at the man who had just come out, at the straight figure, the readymade suit, the bronzed face-weather bronze, not sunbath tan—small things that stamped him as an outlander and an alien here. Lee retured the glance with a brief stare. Unconsciously, involuntarily, it was a measuring glance on both sides. Each would know the other again.

In her own room Virginia hurled from her the dress that she had chosen so carefully Lee had been brutal, abominable! How dared he say that she was not loyal to her father's memory?

A shirker. . . . The land Matt Blair had labored and fought for—had died for. The words spun around in her head, around and around, endlessly persistent

Over there was the bell that would bring Marie, the maid that she and her aunt shared between them. Marie would pack for her swiftly, if she really decided to go. . . .

"Marie, I want you to pack these—"

She looked up from a reckhurling of silken garments It was not Marie but Anna who stood in the door.

"Mr. Stanley Bradish is below, Miss Virginia."

Virginia remembered Stanley wanted her to go out on the yacht with him before the other guests arrived.

"Oh! Tell him I'm sorry, but I can't go."

Mrs. Archer was coming down the hall She interposed quickly.

"Surely you can get ready, darling. It's only a little early. I'll send Marie to you right away."

"No, thanks, Aunt Adele. Just tell him I'm sorry, Anna, but I can't come at all. I'll write him and explain."

"Virginia, what can you be thinking of!"

Virginia's hands clenched at her sides. The tears still shone on her lashes. "I'm going west tomorrow I've got to. Please don't ask me to talk about it."

The days and nights on a transcontinental train were monotonous, but they gave Virginia time for thought. Her first anger at Lee dwindled and receded as a clear little brook returns to its banks after a freshet. She was coming back, not to obey Lee Hollister's high handed commands, but to show him that he was wrong. After that she would do as she pleased with her own property.

At Saunders Lawler was there to meet her, so was Curly sunburned and grinning, waiting to take her checks and help pack her hand baggage into the old car that had been good enough for Matt while Virginia was away

Only once did Lawler, a lank, big-boned man with pale eyes and a straggling mustache proffer a remark of any moment. They were jolting over a peculiarly atrocious bit of road

"Bad goin', he jerked. "I hope the millionaire that's buyin' your place will fix up this road.

"I haven't sold yet," she replied coldly.

"Oh, I thought you was goin' to." A glaze seemed to have come over Lawler's pale eyes.

She did not reply, and they rattled and lurched on. The foot hills were opening up before them; they dived suddenly from prismatic brilliance into shadow, then climbed again, through a narrow defile to a suddenly widening sweep, into the Valley of the Sun. Up there was the old ranch house and, on the porch, hobbling excitedly on rheumatic feet, a little wizened old man.

"I knowed ye'd come back, Honey! I knowed it! There, there!" For a proud young head that bowed for no one had dropped suddenly against Joey's deplorable flannel shirt.

"There, there," Joey crooned. "You'll be glad ye've come Its been awful lonesome without ye. If that orney young nuisance of a Lee Hollister hadn't come pesterin' around again, I'd have gone plumb out of my head."

The moment of abandon was brief. She raised her head.

"Oh, is Lee here?"

"Well,he ain't exactly here, but he drops in on me now and then."

Joey shot a shrewd glance at her, but Virginia made no comment Lawler, for the moment disregarded, had come up with her bags and was evidently waiting to go in with her. She dismissed him carelessly. "Thanks, Lawler. You may leave the bags here; Ling will look after them."

She left him, glowering and discomfited, while she greeted Ling Joey followed the manager with malicious glee.

"Pretty fine to have the boss back, ain't it he asked slyly.

* * *

The afternoon had been long Virginia had worked energetically, setting herself to unaccustomed tasks In the midst of unpacking there had been an interminable hour of going over dreary details and bewildering accounts with Lawler. The Circle V was not making enough to cover operating expenses and the interest on a burden of debt.

This was the old story again, leaving Virginia depressed and dispirited, and glad to see Lawler leave. She called back to Ling that she was going to see Joey and walked slowly toward the horse corral

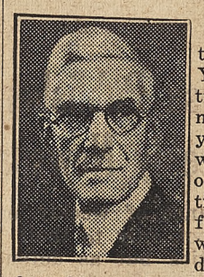
Cavalcade of a Nation

(Ed. note: This is one of a series of short articles taken from data compiled for scenes of "AMERICA! CAVALCADE OF A NATION", theme spectacle of the 1940 California World's Fair at San Francisco)

Half of the Plymouth Pilgrims died during the first bleak winter on the cold New England coast But, despite the suffering and many deaths, the survivors refused to sail on the Mayflower back to England in the following spring; to a man they remained to make America their permanent home. Their profits from fish and fur enabled them in 1627 to take up the debt which they owed to the London merchants, thus freeing them from interference by a group which had no sympathy with their desire to found a religious community in the new world.

Doctor Townsend Says .....



RECENTLY the National Youth Administration in Illinois had 17,341 young men and women enrolled on federal part-time work. The financial load was too heavy, despite the fact that this number was only a very small fraction of the unemployed youth in Illinois. A big job hunt was started. Newspapers and broadcasters joined in to help. A flood of mail went out to employers, and those wanting jobs began pounding pavements hunting for jobs. The result —1,513 new jobs—far less than one job to an industrial enterprise in the state. What about the other 15,828 job-seekers? What about millions more in America? Make that a part of your campaign talks, Mr. Presidential candidate!

MRS. LaCOURSE DIES AT LAKESIDE HOME

Mrs. Anna M. LaCourse, age 63, a resident of Lakeside Farms area, passed away on May 27. She was the wife of Henry LaCourse, mother of Cecil LaCourse of Lakeside, Clarence LaCourse of Sheridan Montana and Harry LaCourse of Joliet, Montana.

Dear Diary

By DOROTHY TURNER

FRIDAY, MAY 24. May we present?—Ralph Gibbs, horticulturist. Mr. Gibbs has a beautiful growing specimen of Crythrina Crisfugalli. What, you haven't heard of it? Mr. Gibbs says that in plain U.S.A. it is a coral tree. A bouquet was presented to Postmaster Helm.

Grossmont students dropped their books and held their annual Junior-Senior prom tonight at the Collegiate Club.

Our local artist, Miss Celia Denlinger, was formally pledged into the San Diego State College Art Guild tonight at an impressive ceremony.

SATURDAY, MAY 25. Where was everyone today. Somehow the town looked rather quiet, except while local housewives were doing their week end shopping.

Mr. and Mrs. John T. Boddie are enjoying a weekend visit from Miss Dorothy Forbes of San Diego.

SUNDAY, MAY 26. Fourteen young people were inspired by a talk given by Dr. D. G. Stewart tonight at the home of Rev. and Mrs. T. J. Nalbach. Dr. Stewart outlined the four-committee plan recently adopted by the Christian Endeavor to give more young people a chance to participate in group action.

MONDAY, MAY 27. We are sorry to report that Harold Laws is ill with a severe cold.

The sixth graders trecked off to the beach today to have a good time.

TUESDAY, MAY 28. Another horticulturist, J. Albin Johnson, of El Monte Park, specializes in Easter lilies. Friday he presented Postmaster and Mrs. Thomas Helm with a single stalk bearing five blossoms and four buds. Mr. Johnson has given specimens to other fortunate towns-people, including the Lakeside Farmer, who received a stalk with nine blossoms and two buds.

Mrs. Ira Philbrook returned home today from Quintard Hospital, after an appendictomy.

Mr. and Mrs. B. J. Conrad were dinner guests of Mr. and Mrs. H. B. Yakel of San Diego

Rev. T. I. Nalbach was a lifesaver tonight at 10:00, when he brought weary Farmer employees homemade root beer and cookies.

WEDNESDAY, MAY 29. With final examinations to worry about and study for, I didn't have time to get out and find out what happened today.

Miss Barbara Woody arrived today to be the house guest of Mrs. Marvin McCray and son Marvin Jr.

THURSDAY, MAY 30. The sun very obligingly came out practically full-strength today to greet vacationers. Main Street was a busy thoroughfare for travelers to Lake Lindo, El Capitan, El Monte Park, and Ramona.

Tonight there was another bridge tournament of the Skirts and Trousers Club at the home of Mr. and Mrs. B. J. Conrad. A streak of luck and good playing has given the women new hope.

Mrs. Luella Turner and Miss Dorcas Turner, of Fullerton, are spending the holiday with us in Lakeside.

Mrs. Thomas Helm sent in a lovely spray of perennial sweet peas to us today.

More finals to come, so I'd better stop, dear diary, and get busy studying. Good night.

SCHOLARSHIPS FOR CMTC ENROLLEES

Colonel Homer M. Groninger, Commanding Officer, Presidio of Monterey, who also will command the CMT Camp at Camp Ord, announces that a number of scholarships have been offered to trainees of the summer CMT Camps.

The opportunity to qualify for these awards is one more of the many advantages that a young man may gain by attendance.

Sister of Mrs. Lucas Dies In San Diego

Mrs. J. L. Longley, 63, sister of Mrs. Charles M. Lucas of Lakeside Farms, died May 23 at her home in San Diego. Mrs. Longley was a former resident here and those who knew her heard with much regret the news of her passing. Her death came suddenly from a heart attack and was quite a shock to her relatives and friends.

Mrs. Longley had been active for years in Fairmount Baptist Church, San Diego, and the funeral services were held there on Monday, May 27, with the Rev. A. V. Marsh officiating. Entombment was in Greenwood mausoleum.

Mrs. Longley was the wife of J. L. Longley, a retired member of the San Diego Police department. She was a daughter of Mrs. Carolyn Phillips, Hollywood; mother of Dr. J. Earl Longley, Yosemite, and Lt Carl M. Longley, Quantico, Va. and sister of Mrs. Lucas, Lakeside; Mrs. Margaret E. Baird, Hollywood, and Mrs. Vera Ellen Marshal, John and Oscar Phillips, all of San Diego.

CHRISTIAN SCIENCE CHURCHES

The Lesson-Sermon on Sunday in all Churches of Christ, Scientist, cites for its Golden Text this verse from Jeremiah, "Sing unto the Lord, praise ye the Lord: for he hath delivered the soul of the poor from the hand of evildoers," and denounces ancient and modern necromancy, alias mesmerism and hypnotism.

One of the Scriptural selections includes these verses from Numbers: "And the Lord put a word in Balaam's mouth, and said, Return unto Balak, and thus thou shalt speak. . . . How shall I curse, whom God hath not cursed? . . . And Balak said unto Balaam, What hast thou done unto me? I took thee to curse mine enemies, and, behold, thou hast blessed them altogether. . . . And the Lord met Balaam, and put a word in his mouth, and said, Go again unto Balak, and say thus. . . . God is not a man, that he should lie; neither the son of man, that he should repent: hath he said, and shall he not do it? or hath he spoken, and shall he not make it good? Behold, I have received commandment to bless: and he hath blessed; and I cannot reverse it."

A passage from "Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures" by Mary Baker Eddy states: "In the Science of Mind, you will soon ascertain that error cannot destroy error. You will also learn that in Science there is no transfer of evil suggestions from one mortal to another, for there is but one Mind, and this ever-present omnipotent Mind is reflected by man and governs the entire universe."

PREDICTS POULTRY PRICES WILL RISE

Established commercial poultrymen will be justified in brooding their usual full capacity of chicks this year, according to Jean C. Miller, assistant farm advisor, representing the University of California agricultural extension service in San Diego county.

By 1941, says Miller, the present condition of over production and low prices should be past. There should be fewer birds on the farms, decreased production, and improved economic conditions.

At present, Miller points out egg prices are low while feed prices are high.

FRIEND GIVES LIFE SKETCH OF DR. IREYS

These plans were shattered by the illness which led to his residence in California.

As a boy and young man, Juny Ireys had a host of friends. In fact, every man who ever really knew him was his friend. In his youth and early manhood, no one could have lived a more normal or more satisfying life. He was a faithful student, and left behind him an enviable record in the medical school of the University of Pennsylvania. At the University of Mississippi, he was outstanding in athletics. He was one of the best all around ball players, and concededly the greatest shortstop, which the University had known down to his time. He was a member of Phi Chapter, fraternity of Delta Psi.

After his removal to California, he continued his interest in sports and outdoor life. He spent part of each year in the mountains, and became one of the outstanding non-professional fishermen and big game hunters of that state. During this period, he was one of the best pistol shots in California. He continued his interest in baseball and football after he became confined to his room, and could keep in contact with sporting events only by means of the radio.

Another distinct aspect of Dr. Ireys' life was his devoutly religious nature. From boyhood to the day of his death, he exemplified in his daily walk and conversation the virtues and attributes which have been the possession of Christian character through all the ages of the Christian era. He had a Pauline conception of personal missionary responsibility, and a zeal which approached that of St. Paul in the Christian ministrations of his daily life. He lived up to the best traditions of both his New England and his Virginia ancestry,—the Puritan and the Cavalier. Always and under all circumstances, in the highest sense of the terms, he was a man and a gentleman.

In the closing days of his closing years, he came home to die. His end came in the midst of the peace, companionship and love of the family from which he had been separated so long, and which he has left again for a while.

Goodness consists not in the outward things we do, but in the inward things we are.—E. H. Chapin.

FROCK FOR TOTS

Here is a simple frock (8687) for the little girl in your life, that will have an irresistible daintiness when you make it yourself and give it the fine, eareful finishing that costs a lot when you buy it ready-made! This frock hangs full and flaring from a pointed shoulder yoke, with two inverted pleats in the front and one in the back, and the little bow under the chin looks so sweet!

This design gives you a choice of two sleeve styles—little round puffs or fluttering wings that make her look like an angel. Buttercup yellow dimity, pale pink lawn, blue organdy or white batiste make up beautifully like this.

Pattern No. 8687 is designed for sizes 1, 2, 3, 4 and 5 years.

Pattern 8684—It's a joy to get hold of an apron that won't slip and slide, goes on and ties without any tricky cross-buttoning, and really looks well, while it's attending to its business of protecting your frock thoroughly. This new one goes on over your head, covers the top as well as the skirt of what ever you have on beneath. And it fits beautifully—the wide waistline section of the bodice is cleverly cut on the bias, to take care of that.

What's more, you can make the same basic apron look very different, according to whether you finish it plain, with bias binding, or add two patch pockets, and trim it with a lot of rirac braid. Gingham, percale, calico and chintz are nice bright materials for this.

Pattern No. 8684 is designed for sizes 34, 36, 38, 40, 42, 44, 46 and 48.

The Country Garden

TROUBLE FREE VINES

Vines are an essential part of any landscape. We have only to go to nature to learn the effective use she makes of these accomodating plants. Whether it is in clothing bare rocks, adorning plain green shrubs, or making a fairy-like bower as they drape gracefully down from tree limbs, nature uses these versatile children of hers in a variety of ways.

When we find on observation, how well she does with these through the long summers devoid of rain we may decide to emulate her and bring some of these accomodating vines into our own garden.

There is a greater need for an appreciation of the adaptability of natures lavish gifts. When we find a vine that will cover an immense area with softening gray foliage intermingled with large trumpet-shaped yellow flowers, we should visualize where in our cultivated plot of ground such a cover can be most effectively used. This vine is a distant cousin of the pumpkin family, often called mock orange. The botanists know it as Cucurbita foetidissima, but we call it simply wild gourd. If you ever attempt to move a root you will discover its secret of living through the summer drought, without wilting down, and producing a lavish crop of decorative little fruit. If these are gathered the vine will not spread, and you have some potential ornaments for charm strings

One of the first green cloaks which nature spreads over rocks and rills is the wild cucumber. Its racemes of fragrant cream colored flowers and lush green foliage are truly a harbinger of spring. It too has an immense root. It is a good companion plant for the wild gourd, because it has already finished its short cycle of life, before the sleepy gourd awakens. It is lovely while it lasts, with its lush green of annual growth, but its demise is almost as rapid as its growth.

The wild Clematis is one of the widest distributed of our native American flowering vines, Some are very showy, others more modest, but the two which grow here are valuable vines for our southland gardens In early summer a sheet of sweet scented creamy flowers is the impression one gains when coming on Clematis lasiantha, clambering over some huge granite boulder or low brush of the foothills. Because of its gentle sweet fragrance it is affectionately called virgin's bower.

Another Clematis (ligusticifolia) is an inhabitant of the lesser water ways of Southern California and sends long trailing branches down to kiss the gently rippling water of our mountain and foot hill brooks. This vine will grow anywhere that a cool moist root run can be provided.

A vine which provides both food and shelter for our wild feathered woodland inhabitants is the wild grape. It keeps a splendid green all through the long dry summer, and if a wild spot is at hand don't neglect to plant one of these vines. It will convert the plainest wild tree into a bower of pendulant streamers. In spring it is delightful with its young buds of velvety sunset pink leaves adorning its long trailing limbs.

Of the smaller vines, yet bringing each spring into the garden a note of woodland beauty is the wild sweet pea. Planted near a green bush of any variety it will convert it into a beauty spot with its pink to deep crimson flowers. Even the lowly Chapperell becomes a gorgeous flower bedecked plant simply by providing support for this loveliest of small-growing vines.

These five vines mentioned are all problem solvers. To clothe hot rocks, to cover dry banks, or enhance the wild borders of the garden they should be used freely because they have been tested thoroughly by the best gardener we have. And they have come through with colors flying.

UNEMPLOYED AIDED IN SAN DIEGO AREA

Claimants in the San Diego area for unemployment insurarce received $119,075, according to the last monthly report of the State Dept. of Employment. This report reflects business improvement for it shows a 12.2 percent gain in private placements made during April over March, 1940, with 20,413 workers being placed in private employment, according to Ray Mathewson, manager of the San Diego office of the department. Corresponding decreases in unemployment insurance payments were experienced during the same period, he indicated, with payments decreasing from $6,544,333 in March to an April total of $6,028,739.

In San Diego placements have shown a continuous steady increase since the first of the year, primarily due to industrial expansion. Domestic placements have receded somewhat due to movement of navy personal, although a shortage always exhists of qualified domestic workers who are unencumbered and can merge in someone else's household.

ASK U. S. DEFINITION AGRICULTURAL LABOR

Declaring that the definition of "agricultural labor" adopted by the California Employment Commission is inconsistent, impractical of administration and discriminatory to California farmers, the California Farm Bureau Federation has asked the Legislature at Sacramento to adopt a concurrent resolution directing the Commission to amend its definition so as to conform to that set forth in the Federal Social Security Act. The Federal act exempts all agricultural services performed for any person regardless of whether such person is the owner or tenant.
